We would like to express our gratitude to all contributors whose insightful research on Kurdish and related languages has enriched this special issue. We were very lucky to enjoy the invaluable expertise and support of a very well-known researcher and writer on Iranian languages, Erik Anonby of Carleton University who, as the guest editor of this issue helped us with much enthusiasm and commitment throughout the publication process. We were also fortunate to enjoy the company of our dear friend Mehdi Fatahi who worked hard to provide a flawless English proof. Special thanks are also due to friends and colleagues who as reviewers contributed very much to timely publication of the manuscripts. We would also like to express our appreciation to members of the editorial team including Shoja Tafakori Rezaei, Ladan Javaheri, Nasrin Azizi, Elham Karami, Hoda Rezaei, and our Editorial Assistant Maryam Hoseini who were present in all stages of the publication process. We should also thank Alireza Nowruzi who has seriously worked to update our journal to meet the international standards for the publication of academic journals.

At the end, we wish to express our gratitude to the Research Department of Razi University for their motivation and funding of this journal.
